

DOMINATING CLOUDS

When I was on my jaunt, last Sunday thick clouds dominated the early morning sky, suggesting an eerie ambiance hanging about on the horizon.

Though they are smacked of thick blue, with a hint of white, for a while, they played with pale orange and yellow colors also. The transient drama was too quick; I havenâ??t got time even to set up my tripod.

Within that brief spell, my camera could capture the clouds thick with infinite beauty sneaking across the skyline and the silvery effect it had at the other end on the bridge.
